Writer's note: With Daniel Island mirroring more and more each year the culinary charisma of its City sibling, the downtown peninsula, we figured it was high time to highlight the talented chefs who are making that happen. And so we launch our newest column, Making DI Delicious: Island Chef Insider, where we will regularly dig into the bio and brilliance of each such captain of the kitchen. Our aim is to eventually feature every island chef, and hope our readers enjoy learning about them as much as they love eating their food.

Monica Farrell might be full of surprises. Or she might just be giving us her best few. The first one? The fact that, for a seasoned executive chef with the face of a rookie but the swagger of a veteran, she came into her passion well beyond her "formative" years.

"I spent very little, if any, time in the kitchen growing up," she reveals. "My interest in cooking came a little later in life, and we weren't a very food-centric family."

Farrell joined Ristorante LIDI in December 2014, when the Italian eatery was just ten months old, and has served as executive chef of "Little Italy Daniel Island" since late summer

A WIN-ning way to support March of Dimes!

ELIZABETH BUSH

beth@thedanielislandnews.com

Daniel Island's SunTrust Bank Branch Manager Sheila Underwood has come up with a win-win approach to supporting the local chapter of the March of Dimes (MOD).

As part of the bank's annual MOD fundraising efforts, the branch has partnered with the Daniel Island Women's Island Network, better known as WIN, to raffle off some 25 prizes offered by members of the group.

"I thought it would be a great idea to incorporate our fundraising efforts with an activity that will also provide exposure for the members of WIN!" said Underwood, who is a WIN member.

Underwood defines WIN as a group of professional women who live and/or work in the 29492 zip code.

"Our goal is to support each other and refer to each other at every opportunity, so our locally owned businesses can thrive on Daniel Island," she continued. "Many of the WIN ladies work from home. They don't have store-fronts, so they rely heavily on word-of-mouth referrals to help them achieve success."

Raffle tickets can be purchased for $3 per ticket, or $5 for two tickets, at SunTrust on Daniel Island through March 31, when the drawings will take place. All proceeds will benefit the March of Dimes. Prizes include a 60 minute massage by Method Health Center, a Mary Kay gift basket from Independent Mark Kay Consultant Chelsea Crawford, a Shutterfly book from Front Porch Travel, two tickets to a Charleston Jazz Orchestra concert offered by Jazz Artists of Charleston, a family photo session by Southern Vintage Design, and much more (see complete list in sidebar).

According to Underwood, WIN was started about 10 years ago by three or four ladies on Daniel Island interested in meeting once a month to socialize. Underwood joined the group a short time later.

"Over the years each of us have invited more people and it has grown into this fabulous group," she said. "We now have 51 members! We usually have at least 25 at lunch every month. We just want to help each other be successful, by referring to each other, whether its for an attorney, insurance benefits, a realtor, banker, et cetera. It's a really good networking opportunity."

At the WIN raffle drawings on March 31 SunTrust is also planning to celebrate its 10 year anniversary on Daniel Island. Their official opening date was April 6, 2006. Anyone interested in obtaining more information about WIN or the raffle can contact Underwood at (843) 654-6289.

Remove cloud cover from public information, let sun shine in

RICHARD WHITING

It's not so much a celebration as it is an awareness campaign.

Throughout the state and all across the country, this week – March 13-19 – is designated as Sunshine Week. The week has nothing to do with weather conditions but everything to do with how the country is weathering a constant chipping away of its rights to be served by a transparent government in which public information flows readily into the hands of the people served by those they elect and appoint. This applies to the grassroots level, the state level and, certainly, the federal level.

Here in South Carolina we frequently hear lawmakers state their staunch support for the public's right to access public information, but let meaningful legislation hit the floor and watch how quickly the particulars are debated and kept at bay from a vote as it is batted back and forth in committee until, suddenly and quite deliberately, another session has come and gone with little or nothing accomplished.

State Rep. Bill Taylor, R-Aiken, has been on the front lines for years now in an effort to bring about logical and meaningful changes to the state's Freedom of Information Act, a law whose teeth sit like a set of dentures in a bedside glass. Taylor has sought to reduce fees associated with obtaining public information, fees that are often arbitrary at best, deliberately intimidating at worst. Exorbitant hourly research fees are foisted on the public in an effort to stave off further inquiries. Roadblocks are established that are the equivalent of an inquisition into why someone in the public sector wants access to information it rightfully should receive. Delay tactics are deployed that allow public bodies to shelter information until receipt of the information becomes irrelevant. Copy fees far in excess of what any office supply store would charge are assessed for information that could easily be transmitted electronically because nowadays so much information is stored digitally.

Do not be fooled by the platitudes that roll out of the mouths of lawmakers who claim they are doing the public's business in full and open view as they attach amendments, debate amendments and hold public information hostage in committee. Do not be fooled by lawmakers who claim to be staunch supporters of open, transparent government who then stone-wall efforts to open the doors and windows to the public eye instead of working in concert with other lawmakers to remodel a state law in need of repair on the public's behalf.

We are in an era in which government does not seem to mind extending its reach into gathering information on us, but resists – and even erodes – efforts by the public to access information that belongs in its purview.

Newspapers have long been the champions of the people's right to access public information. We continue that effort today and strive to help bring about a greater understanding of what is public information through stories, editorials and, on occasion, lawsuits that must be filed as a last resort to pry from the hands of public bodies that which belongs in the hands of the public.

As chairman of the S.C. Press Association's Freedom of Information committee, I urge you to develop a greater understanding of what constitutes public information and your rights to that information under the state's Freedom of Information Act. And I urge you to remind your school boards, your town, city and county councils, your state lawmakers, your public servants that they work for you.

Tell them that when it comes to accessing public information, you want the forecast to be and remain sunny. There's been too much cloud cover already.

BEWARE OF STREET PARKING

Late in the evening on Friday, March 11, someone sideswiped our Town & Country van at 1307 Smythe Street, knocking the large side mirror completely off, crushing the rear door handle and leaving a stripe down the driver's side of the car. The side mirror was nowhere to be found, so evidently they took that with them. If anyone has knowledge of this, please contact the Daniel Island police station at 843-

743-7200 or 843-849-0304 to speak with a policeman or leave a message. There has to be damage to their car as well. Thank you.

Ten and Five Years Ago in THE DANIEL ISLAND NEWS

TEN YEARS AGO

1,300-acre State Sports Authority to be sold

In the March 17, 2006 issue, the top news story was that Gov. Sanford came to Daniel Island to announce that the 1,300-acre tract of undeveloped State Ports Authority land on the south end of Daniel Island would be sold for residential development. The authority originally planned to build a large shipping terminal on the property but abandoned the project after fierce opposition from local residents and politicians. Sanford presented a plan that called for the development of the 1,300-acre tract as a "Central Park" with lots of green space. Ten years later and the land remains in SPA ownership.

In sports, ten years ago Eric Ashton came in second place in the BE 5K and he also came in second place this year! And, this year's winner of the race, Jay Upchurch, came in 5th place ten years ago.

Governor Sanford circled the bottom part of this map of Daniel Island in talking about his dream plan, which would include more green space on that part of the island.

DINA President Tim Callanan addressed SPA and government leaders with his concerns about the SPA property.

State Rep. Jim Merrill urged islanders to rally behind the residential plans for the land.

FIVE YEARS AGO

Rotary's SIP event on DI to benefit Water Missions

In the March 17, 2011 issue of The Daniel Island News the Daniel Island Rotary Club was sponsoring a SIP event to benefit Water Missions. SIP event offered ticketholders a chance to visit 10 restaurants on Daniel Island, where they were offered free or discounted beverages, appetizers or entrees.

In business news we reported that Fastenation – the nation's largest distributor of Velcro-brand products, was about to move onto Daniel Island. They remain here today.

In our How's Business feature, we interviewed Chris Nickels of Clawson & Staubes, LLC, who reported that "Clawson and Staubes is the largest law firm on DI and the largest firm in Berkeley County. Challenges include staying ahead of the technology curve, balancing our work and civic responsibilities and navigating the Don Holt Bridge on a regular basis!" The firm is still located on Daniel Island.

Volvo Car Open partners with SunTrust to offer Juniors free tickets and MWTennis Academy Clinics

The Volvo Car Open tennis tournament continues its mission to grow the game of tennis. For the second year in a row, the WTA Premier event has partnered with SunTrust to offer juniors, 15 and under, free admission all week into the Volvo Car Open, April 2 – 10.

As an added bonus, every junior who receives complimentary tickets to attend the tournament is eligible for a free clinic with MWTennis Academy, an instructional tennis organization based out of the Family Circle Tennis Center. Redemption for the free clinic will be located at the SunTrust booth in the fan area. Kids who sign up for the free clinic Tuesday through Sunday will receive a complimentary deck of Shine Bright Kids Financially Bright Conversation Cards from SunTrust, limited while supplies last.

“We saw great success last year when we initially partnered with SunTrust to offer juniors unparalleled access to our tournament,” said Bob Moran, Volvo Car Open Tournament Director. “It’s our collective goal to inspire the next generation of tennis players and fans, and by giving children the opportunity to be exposed to an international, world-renowned tennis event, we feel that our nine-day tournament can become the catalyst for a lifelong love affair with the sport. None of this would be possible without SunTrust’s commitment to grow the game of tennis.”

“At SunTrust, we’re proud to celebrate our 10th year serving our clients in the Charleston region, and the 9th year of our partnership with this world-class tennis event,” said Mark Lattanzio, SunTrust Region President. “We’re pleased to be a part of this community and event, and through the onUp movement, help our clients and neighbors take steps toward financial confidence.”

SunTrust will also sponsor the City of Charleston’s Tennis in the City event, an annual one-day inner-city youth tennis clinic held at the Jack Adams Tennis Center in downtown Charleston during the Volvo Car Open. Since its inception in 2003, this event has made a profound impact on thousands of local, Charleston children. This occasion brings WTA tennis players, tennis pros, as well as high school and college teams together to introduce the game of tennis to local children, in turn helping them learn basics of the game in an exciting environment.

Complimentary junior tickets can be redeemed via www.VolvoCarOpen.com, by calling 800.677.2293 or via the Box Office, located at 161 Seven Farms Drive Charleston, SC 29492. To sign-up for a free lesson with MWTennis Academy, visit the SunTrust booth on-site during the tournament, located on Sponsor Row.

Do you have what it takes to belt out the National Anthem in front of thousands? Six lucky singers will have the opportunity to show off their vocal talent at the Volvo Car Open on April 5, 6, 8, 9, and 10.

For the sixth year, the Volvo Car Open, in partnership with Cumulus Radio, will collect online video submissions to narrow down the search for six all-star singers. Online auditions will run from March 7 – 18.

To be considered, singers must: Record a video audition, no longer than two minutes in length, upload a public video to YouTube, visit any of the Cumulus radio stations websites – 95SX, NashFM96.9, 1250 WTMA, z93Jamz and Magic1073 and access the submission form, and provide the link to your YouTube video audition. All entries must be submitted by noon on Friday, March 18.

Ten finalists will be notified on Monday, March 21st and each will move into the final round, to be determined by online voting. Online voting will begin at noon on Monday, March 21 on all Cumulus radio station websites, concluding at 6 p.m. on Monday, March 28. The winners will be announced on-air Tuesday, March 29 and their auditions will be posted to Cumulus Radio websites for online voting.

Hope For Discouraged Leaders

management moment

Doug Dickerson

If you are alive and breathing, you can still become everything God has created you to be.
— Joel Osteen

In 1858 the Illinois legislature- using an obscure statute- sent Stephen A. Douglas to the U.S. Senate instead of Abraham Lincoln, although Lincoln had won the popular vote. When a sympathetic friend asked Lincoln how he felt, he said, "Like the boy who stubbed his toe: I am too big to cry and too badly hurt to laugh."

If you hang around in leadership long enough you will know what discouragement feels like. I'm not trying to depress you but simply stating the obvious. Behind the glittering image and friendly smiles are leaders who face incredible pressures and shoulder responsibilities that can be daunting. Unfortunately, many leaders feel trapped with no one to talk with or vent to due to the "glittering image" that they feel compelled to present to the public.

So let's be honest. Times of discouragement will come. How you react to it will make all the difference going forward. As a leader, you are not immune from troubles- in fact, you may have more. So how do you keep a proper perspective and come through it on the other side a better leader? Here are three reminders that you need to consider.

YOU ARE NOT ALONE

Life happens to all of us. It's not always pretty. As a leader you know this to be true. Disappointments come – you didn't land that new client, a colleague betrayed you, sales are sluggish – you get the picture.

Here is what you need to know: your disappointment today is preparing you for great opportunities tomorrow. But there's a catch. It all hinges on your attitude. While bad things can happen to good people; good people turn bad things into great opportunities.

At a young age Walt Disney easily could have been discouraged and given up. He was fired by the editor of a newspaper for "lacking ideas". He could have taken his rejection and thrown in the towel. But if anything he used that experience to motivate him to greater things – and the rest as they say is history.

So when times of disappoint and discouragement come remember this truth – you are not alone.

YOU ARE STRONGER THAN YOU THINK

One truth I've learned over the years is this:

you can be defined by life's moments or you can define life's moments. So how do you define life's moments? You do so by choosing faith over fear, forgiveness over resentment, and by embracing God's view of your life over man's view. You don't always have control over what comes your way but you can choose your path going forward.

Thomas Edison experienced one of those defining moments in his career. His lab caught fire and was destroyed. All of his work went up in flames. To add insult to injury, his building was under-insured. It was a devastating and defining moment. How would he respond?

"There is great value in disaster," said Edison, "all our mistakes are burned up. Thank God we can start anew." Edison did not choose the fire, but he did choose to define the moment.

Here is the truth to remember: We don't like adversity and disappointments because we mistakenly believe that we can't handle it. But I submit that you are stronger than you think and you can overcome any obstacle that comes your way. Are you ready to define your moment?

YOUR PAST PREPARES YOU- IT DOES NOT DEFINE YOU

Every experience that you go through is preparation for what's next. Along the way you have gained valuable experience. Some of it has come easy while at other times you wish you could have a do-over. It's all part of the learning curve. I've been there countless times and I dare say you have as well.

But if you want to move forward as a leader you have to learn to let go of the past – especially the bad, and cut yourself some slack. What's important is that you have learned your lessons, have peace in your heart, and are stronger as a result.

Discouragement sets in when you see yourself through the lens of a failure rather than through the lens of grace.

Here is the truth you need to remember: you are not the sum of your fears or your mistakes. Your past is your boot camp and it has prepared you for such a time as this.

Times of discouragement will come. But the good news is- it will pass. Stay strong and be encouraged. You are not alone, you are strong, and you are prepared!

Intensive intervention program making its mark on new generation

ELIZABETH BUSH

beth@thedanielislandnews.com

Sitting in a stately remodeled former officer's house on the old Navy Base in North Charleston, dressed in a sharp business suit, Jeff Ballard is articulate, focused, and crystal clear about his current mission in life.

"We teach people," he said, while describing the South Carolina STRONG program that he leads on the site. "We teach them how to live their lives. We give them meaning and a reason to carry on."

Both mentally and physically, Ballard is arguably a far cry from what he presented to this same facility some five years ago, when he entered on a judge's order as an ex-offender who would otherwise have been on his way to prison.

"I had never been to prison," he said. "But I was certain this had to be better than that."

Today, he has successfully matriculated from SC STRONG, having met all of the program's requirements, and now serves as the executive director.

"My probation is now long over," added Ballard, who still resides on the SC STRONG campus and spends much of his time counseling those taking part in the program.

"So I am no longer court-ordered to be here. I've stayed around for a few reasons, but mostly because I wanted to help give back to a place that was key to my recovery. And I believe in what we do here. It's easy for me to get behind it and feel good about it. That's part of me continuing on that right path."

Ballard was the seventeenth resident to become part of the Charleston area SC STRONG initiative, which is modeled after the successful "Delancey Street" program based in San Francisco, California. Like its five other Delancey Street counterparts across the country, SC STRONG seeks to help ex-criminals, substance abusers, the homeless, and others who have hit rock bottom, embark on new beginnings through intensive intervention in a structured setting. All of the residents are men. Each commits to spending two years living and working on the site, which includes three large homes and expansive grounds. They work for the benefit of the program and earn their keep by participating in a number of SC STRONG-run businesses, which include moving services, catering, furniture restoration, light construction, and landscaping.

"We are a self-sufficient program," said Ballard. "We have businesses that we run that pay for all the bills, and there are a lot of expenses. So the residents come in and they are active participants in their recovery... No one is a hand out saying 'please help me.' They understand what's coming in."

The number one requirement? You have to want to be here.

"We're looking for people that are really trying to change their life," added Ballard, a top student who is to earn his Associates Degree from Trident Technical College. "This isn't a homeless shelter. It's not a flop for people who can just come and stay for a little while until they feel better. We're looking for people that are willing to take two years and get their lives together."

There are two ways to gain entry to the program. About 70 percent arrive via the aforementioned alternative sentencing route, said Ballard. Another 30 percent simply walk-in and ask.

"In most cases, they would be homeless, because if they had options, they would be using them," said Ballard. "There is a bench in the foyer of this house. We sit there on the bench and say 'let's get an interview process started.' There is a criteria for those we accept to determine if SC STRONG is a good fit... In certain cases, we may direct them to other places that may be able to help... We don't accept everyone."

Among the criteria for admission - residents have to be sober and non-violent. The facility's homes can take up to 55 people, Ballard added. Right now they have 35. Since SC STRONG was founded here nine years ago, some 1,000 men have been served through the program. Participants commit to a daily schedule that includes attending regular resident meetings designed to encourage and support one another, conducting work around the complex and grounds, and taking care of basic house functions like cooking, cleaning, and laundry. In addition, those in need of educational help take classes twice weekly from other residents who have already earned their General Education Degrees. Those newest to the program initially enter is called the "maintenance" phase of the program and are required to stay on the property for the first several months.

ELIZABETH BUSH

"It takes someone who is really willing to put the work in, to do what you need to do," added Ballard. "The outcome is you're gonna leave with a job, with money in your pocket, and a place to go. You're gonna have all of that stuff figured out before you leave. And if that's not the goal, then this might not be the place for you."

When asked if SC STRONG has had any interest from residents of the so-called "Tent City" in downtown Charleston, a homeless conglomerate near the Meeting Street exit that is in the process of being dismantled by the City of Charleston, Ballard said "no."

"I can only give my opinion, but I feel like a large portion of people who feel comfortable living in places like that aren't really looking for much more than that," he added. "If someone doesn't want help, there's not a lot you can do for them."

Thankfully, SC STRONG resident Thomas McArdle did want help when he entered the program a little over a year ago, instead of going to jail. Today, as he continues to work through the program, he helps get new residents acclimated and offers words of wisdom for those in need of counsel.

"We have this concept here where it's 'each one teach one,'" he said. "And it really goes a long way for residents here to be able to show somebody else something. It really means something."

Most of the work on the three homes on the SC STRONG campus was completed by the residents. Before the program moved in, all three structures were boarded up and vacant. McArdle proudly showed off the re-purposed properties on a recent tour, including the beautifully restored "Quarters C," a former Admiral's residence and the site of a recent campaign stop by Presidential Candidate Hillary Clinton.

"This is our pride and joy right here," said McArdle, while pointing out the extensive remodeling done on the early 1900s-era home.

ELIZABETH BUSH

Abdullah Curry, one of the SC STRONG residents.

For McArdle, the pride he feels in leaving his mark on the physical structures here is just a small part of a much bigger reward. In addition to being one of the members who oversees the house and its residents, he also visits jails every day to screen potential new clients for the program.

"I was in jail once too," he said. "Now I go to jails and walk through them like I have a key in my pocket. It's pretty amazing. Hundreds of people write to us every month and unfortunately we can't help everybody. So it's a really strategic process trying to pick who we are going to allow in here...I definitely try to be a good role model for those people who come in behind me. It's very rewarding. The experiences that I've had here have been tremendous."

Daniel Island resident Meghan Bornstein is also a mighty proponent for SC STRONG. As a member of the SC STRONG Advisory Board, Bornstein has seen firsthand the difference the program makes in the lives of participants, particularly when residents are able to get out into the community and work for one of the SC STRONG businesses.

"I've always been somebody to root for the underdog," said Bornstein, who recently worked with Bishop England High School students to create a flyer for the program's moving services. "And when they're on a job or hosting an event, they have something to prove to people...They have pride in giving back. I just think there is something special when you watch these men on projects...There's something so thrilling about being around them and seeing the change in them. You can just see it in their eyes, and it's absolutely awesome."

Ballard may once have been considered an underdog himself. But not anymore.

"I had to figure out why I was living my life that way," he said, of the dark days that preceded his arrival at SC STRONG. "I just needed to get some understanding of myself...And I had a strong desire to change that. Thank goodness this place allowed me to go through all of the phases that I needed to go through, while keeping me safe...People do see people doing better here and want to stay and get their lives together. I'm very proud of that."

This flyer promoting the moving services offered by SC STRONG was created by business/marketing students at Bishop England High School last fall.

18th Annual Bishop England 5K is fast and philanthropic

Staff report

One hundred sixty-seven runners and walkers completed the 18th Annual Bishop England 5K. The eclectic group of runners ranged in age from 5 to 86. The overall male winner was Jay Upchurch of James Island, finishing at 15:55.479. A very close second place went to Daniel Island resident Eric Ashton, less than 3 seconds behind at 15:58.426. Third place went to Daniel Island resident Paul Malek (16:30.179.)

In the women's division, the overall winner was Beaufort resident Joy Miller (17:49.589). Second place went to Shawanna White of Columbia (19:21.17) and third place to Mt. Pleasant resident Catherine Hollister (20:09.669)

This year's event had a special twist – it served as part of a fundraiser toward expenses for Bishop England student/runner Abby Johnson, who was diagnosed with Stage II Hodgkin's Lymphoma last fall. A GiveForward fundraising campaign for Abby, initiated shortly after her diagnosis, has achieved over half of its $15,000 goal; the DI 5k aimed to make a further run for that target. To make a donation to Abby Johnson's GiveForward campaign, visit <https://www.giveforward.com/fundraiser/nlj/b/abby-johnson-s-hodgkin-s-lymphoma-fundraiser>.

fishing trends

GREG PERALTA

Thanks to all attendees of the fishing class on Saturday. I appreciate your time and support of the Lucy Boyle Memorial Fund. After class, the youngest attendee (my neighbor Luke) joined me for a quick fishing trip. The weather was warm (almost hot) but a strong breeze against the tide made for rough conditions in the Wando.

Over the past week or so, Trout have moved out of their winter homes (deep channels and ledges) into shallow water areas. When shallow, the Trout tend to congregate in creek mouths on the falling tide. So this is where Luke and I began fishing (after a rough ride up river). Upon our arrival, Luke selected a rod rigged with a Trout Trick on a Trout Eye jig. His first cast was perfectly placed (in the current seam formed by water draining out of the creek). Almost immediately, a Trout inhaled his lure. After a quick picture, Luke carefully released the fish. It did not take long for him to catch another (and another). Luke has become a very good angler!

The large winter schools of Redfish are beginning to break up. More and more, I am seeing pods of 10 to 15 fish (verses schools of 50 to 100 in the winter). While more difficult to locate, the fish in smaller schools are easier to catch. These fish seem to be much less wary (and hungry). While the large schools of winter are dissipating, there are still lots of Redfish in the shallows. This week, I will be targeting them with top water lures. My new favorite is a Lucky Craft Sammy 100. I have a much better hook up ratio (especially with Redfish) when using this lure.

PROVIDED

It may be windy, but the Trout, Redfish and Flounder are plentiful and hungry.

Noshing Nirvana

The best thing
you ate all month

JENNIFER JOHNSTON

jennifer@thedanielislandnews.com

Within one city, there is an island and a peninsula. (I know. Mind blown.) And on each land mass, there exists an authentic culinary representation of different nations. (Stay with me.) On the island: a comforting taste of old Italy. On the peninsula: a fiesta of Mexican flavors. What does this all mean? It means, my lucky Lowcountry friend, that you need only traverse a bridge or two to eat like an international jetsetter. We present... this month's Noshing Nirvana...

Katherine Smith, island resident and "jack of all trades" for the Daniel Island News, does not mince words: "Ristorante LIDI on Daniel Island has the best meatball appetizer." The eatery's Polpetta, the Italian word for meatballs, is a mixture of pork and veal slow cooked in marinara sauce. Smith also makes known that the dish is served steaming hot, "which helps melt the fresh Parmesan that can be added by the server if you wish." (There are few among us who would not wish for that.)

And then it's as if Smith, sensing our reluctance to believe that she has actually found the holy grail of spherical protein, shuts us down with this: "A rich tomato-based marinara sauce provides just the right amount of moisture to dip each bite in to. And due to the slow cooking method, the meatballs melt in your mouth."

We are temporarily broken from our foodie dreamscape only by her pragmatic observation that LIDI's Polpetta is a great low-carb option when dining Italian. Still, the spell is not broken, and we find ourselves counting the hours until we, too, can order this $13 two massive meatball starter with a side salad as a full, delicious meal. Thank you, Katherine Smith, for your unapologetic candor and courageous superlative.

So far, Kimberly Jackson's addiction to downtown Charleston's Minero restaurant hasn't created strife at home or impacted her career. So far. The Daniel Island resident was even willing to go public with her dependency on the Mexican fare in this printed space, knowing that doing so might prompt an intervention from those close to her.

"It's a given," Jackson discloses, "whenever we are trying to decide where to eat out that I will suggest Minero. And you better believe I drag the out of town guests there, too, just so I can get my fix."

And though that fix is fixed with any number of items on the menu – inventive tacos, grilled wings, queso fundido – the one that is perhaps most dependable in the Mula. Tender chunks of flavorful pumpkin and mushrooms are drizzled with a special sauce sandwiched between two perfect benne tortillas. And at $6, it's totally accessible. Perhaps a little too accessible.

Acclaimed chef/owner Sean Brock is not one to let junkies... er, devotees... get away easily. "Did I mention the spicy margarita?" Jackson offers. "I don't believe it's on the menu, but if you like a little kick it's a must."

Okay, so we don't typically highlight the cocktails, but apparently Minero's spicy margarita is "a must."

Oh, Kimberly. We see you disappearing through that doorway off East Bay Street again. And we can't just stand by and watch you do this... So save us a seat.

Want to share your tale of noshing nirvana? It's simple – just respond to the following:

- 1) Where were you served the best thing you ate all month?
- 2) What was the food that left you speechless (mainly because you couldn't stop horking it down)?
- 3) Can you describe what made the dish so magical? Be sure to speak slowly...
- 4) Dish more on the dish, if you can – price, portion size, availability on regular menu, and the psychological repercussions of consuming something so rad.
- 5) Please email a photo of your to-die-for dish and responses to the four questions above (don't leave any out!) to jennifer@thedanielislandnews.com.

Farrell serves as executive chef at LIDI

From CHEF on PAGE 01

2015. She had come over from the James Island and Mount Pleasant restaurants of J. Paul's, where her third executive chef position had delivered both a blessing and a curse.

"With few exceptions, I was given free reign over the kitchen," recalls Farrell. "The challenge was doing that in two locations twenty miles apart."

Prior to that, the chef had been invited to help launch Hall's Chophouse. "I had been in Charleston for four years and had never worked downtown," she relates. "That was an experience I wanted to have. As for being there in the early stages, it is always interesting to watch a new restaurant grow from the ground up."

It proved a vastly different tenure than that she'd had with the storied Kiawah Island Club, where she'd kicked off her Lowcountry culinary career years before.

But before she arrived in Charleston, Farrell was a hobbyist cook and part-time caterer co-ed. Surprisingly, it was not until after graduating from college that she realized she wanted to parlay her skillful sideline into a career. Farrell credits the first two chefs for whom she worked with having the most influence on how she approaches her craft today: "The first taught me an appreciation for detail and consistency; the other emphasized simplicity without compromising quality."

Farrell went on to attend a small pilot program of renowned culinary school Johnson & Wales in Vail, Colorado. Though she marked a distinguished finish, she surprises us again by modestly conceding that she was in good company. "All of the students were required to have at least a bachelors degree," Farrell explains. "Almost my entire class of forty graduated with honors. I suppose we were a little more mature and focused than students heading straight from high school."

Farrell continues to bring a focused and purposeful style to her management collaborations. Since she took the wheel at LIDI, lunch is now offered five days a week and dinner is served every evening. The menu has retained its Italian classics and Italian-American favorites, from picattas to marsalas and panini to spaghetti. But Farrell has added a category for more surprising, innovative food (such as buffalo short rib with gnocchi and gremolata) with a Mediterranean influence, and says these items will be updated seasonally.

Another fun concept (surprise?) instituted since Farrell's arrival at LIDI is "Teacher Thursdays." The weekly event is celebrated in the beloved corner bar, with happy hour kicking off at 3 p.m. to toast local educators with discount libations and snacks. LIDI is also hosting a wine dinner with live jazz on March 28. "We did one back in November and it was a great time," Farrell states, adding, "The band may even work in some swing music this time."

Under Farrell's thoughtful leadership, a coveted – yet somewhat elusive – culinary culture has been fostered. "What I find unique about us is the level of support and encouragement given across the board, from the owners to the wait staff," Farrell reveals. "It is refreshing to be in a restaurant without any animosity among the ranks. No silly front of the house versus back of the house. Everyone supports one another."

We concluded our interview with Chef Monica by asking what diners might be surprised to find goes on in the LIDI kitchen. And her parting shot was, in itself, a spot-on witty surprise: "No one is wearing pants back there...Just kidding."

Ristorante LIDI is located at 901 Island Park Drive in Daniel Island. Check out their menu, see special events, and make a reservation at www.ristorantelidi.com.

DIS and Cane Bay students to compete at National Geographic State Bee

Staff report

Daniel Poch, an 8th grade student at Daniel Island School, and Logan Agnew, an 8th grade student at Cane Bay Middle School, both have qualified for and will compete in the National Geographic State Bee in Columbia. The State Bee will be on Friday, April 1 at the Brookland Baptist Church Resource Center, Banquet and Conference Center, located at 1066 Sunset Blvd., West Columbia, SC.

Each fall, schools that wish to participate in the bee apply with the National Geographic Bee. Each participating school receives preliminary school bee question booklets, and a school final question booklet. The preliminary rounds can be held in classrooms, and the final rounds can be school-wide either during or after school. The school champion then must take a qualifying test to be eligible for the State Bee. Both Agnew and Poch became eligible to compete in the State Bee because of their scores on the qualifying test.

The State Bee is an oral competition with each student receiving questions in the practice round and eight preliminary rounds. The students with the top ten scores from the preliminary rounds will advance to the final competition. The final competition consists of a final round and a championship round, the final round being mostly oral. Two of the questions require written answers from students. The final round determines the two finalists who will compete in the championship round, and the two finalists begin the championship round with a clean slate.

The champion from each state is qualified to compete in the National Geographic Bee Championship in Washington, D.C. May 22, 2016, through May 25, 2016.

New PSEMS mascot likely to spur plenty of school spirit!

Iron Horses are ready to represent

ELIZABETH BUSH

beth@thedanielislandnews.com

Giddy up, Cainhoy Peninsula residents. Come August, there will be a new herd galloping into town at the Philip Simmons Elementary and Middle Schools off Clements Ferry Road.

In a special mascot “reveal” at the PSEMS Parent Teacher Association meeting last week at St. Paul Baptist Missionary Church, families got their first look at the schools’ new mascot – the Iron Horses. Two versions were created – one for the elementary school and one for the middle school.

“We’re really excited...to celebrate the unveiling of the mascot, because it’s so important to the branding of our schools,” said Anthony Dixon, Philip Simmons Middle School Principal.

“We just really appreciate the input from the community,” added Philip Simmons Elementary School Principal Karen Whitley.

The mascot, selected from suggestions submitted by future PSEMS families and other community members, was inspired by the schools’ namesake, the late Philip Simmons, a revered ironworks artisan. PTA members later learned that the horse also has another significance to the local area. The land on which the schools sit was once owned by Harry Frank Guggenheim, an avid horseman whose “Dark Star” won the Kentucky Derby in 1953.

Rising third grader Smith Killian gave the Iron Horse an enthusiastic double thumbs up.

“I’m very excited!” added Cainhoy area resident Sue Rothberg, who suggested the Iron Horse as a possible mascot.

Dixon and Whitley also took some time to update the more than 50 people in attendance at the meeting on the schools’ progress. Dixon noted that he had recently met with family members of Philip Simmons to get their feedback on plans for the new facility and its programs.

“It was an amazing opportunity to hear from them, and to get their vision for this school,” he said. “They offered their input on the iron horse. Just hearing how hard Philip Simmons worked and what he did for the community, and this country, in terms of his art work, it’s just going to be a wonderful connection to this school.”

Dixon also reported to the crowd that there will be a Middle School Pep Rally on May 20 for future PSMS students, including those currently enrolled at Daniel Island School and Cainhoy Elementary Middle School (CEMS). The event, to be held at CEMS, will include motiva-tional talks, team building, a "meet and greet" with administration and teachers (those who are in place at that time), and hands-on engaging activities that focus on the school's planned STEAM (science, technology, engineering, arts and math) curriculum.

"We want the students to be as confident and comfortable coming into this new school as possible," said Dixon.

A large part of the focus now, reported both Dixon and Whitley, is getting all future students registered. According to Whitley, there is a great deal of interest being expressed by teachers who'd like to work at the new schools, but they have not started officially hiring instructional staff as of yet. Parents of all potential PSEMS students are encouraged to get registrations completed as soon as possible.

"One of the most important things, and I can't say it enough, is registration," said Whitley. "We're allocated (teachers) based on those numbers."

"Right now, they're not giving us allocations based on probable numbers," added Lisa Kerns, president of the PSMS PTA. "It's only on the hard numbers we have. So we'd really like to get those numbers up so we can get more teachers, and the best teachers! The sooner the better."

Dixon and Whitley are also focusing on preparing the curriculums for the new schools. A Clemson STEAM Night is planned for April 19 at CEMS to give all PSEMS families an opportunity to engage in some of the types of STEAM activities their schools will employ. Staff members will also take part in STEAM training sessions over the summer.

"Besides the allocations and managerial piece, we just want to make sure that instructionally the kids get a rigorous and engaging program," added Dixon.

Both PTAs are also actively fundraising on behalf of the new schools. Community members are invited to purchase commemorative bricks that will be on permanent display on the campus. For additional information on fundraising opportunities, or to register students, visit www.philip-simmonsschools.com. The next registration event will on April 12, beginning at 5:30 p.m., at St. Paul's Missionary Baptist Church.

Philip Simmons Elementary and Middle Schools are slated to open in August of this year, followed by the opening of the new Philip Simmons High School in the fall of 2017.
